News from Ms Andreena

Last week, was National Reconciliation Week. Children were participating in activities to learn about our shared histories and how we can work towards reconciliation in Australia. We all made commitment posters which have been displayed in the gym. We encourage families to have conversations about how they will continue this commitment towards reconciliation. I was fortunate to be able to join an activity where some of our First Nation's girls and their friends, made bracelets for each other. They thought about a word to describe what reconciliation means to them and threaded it into their bracelets. Watching and listening to them respectfully talking, sharing and supporting each other made me feel so very proud to be part of our school community.
